

Students' Society Meeting Postponed When Only Few Members Make Appearance

Lack of Quorum Necessitates Delay of Meeting to Future Date — One Hundred Students Needed for Quorum
But Only Twenty One Attended — President of Council Issues Statement to all Undergraduates.

The Semi-Annual meeting of the Students' Society, scheduled to have been held yesterday in the Union Ballroom, had to be postponed to some future date when barely a handful of students made their appearance. According to the Constitution, no business can be transacted unless a quorum, which consists of one hundred students, is present and accordingly, the meeting was not able to be held when it was seen that there were no more than twenty-five students present.

According to the agenda of the meeting, matters of importance to the student body were to have been discussed. Foremost on the program were the reports to have been presented by the executives of the various organizations including the Students' Council, the McGill Union, the Daily and others. In addition, as a result of proposals put forth in connection with the Annual and the Red and White Revue, it was hoped that there would be a large attendance to discuss the proposals so that ultimate action might be representative of the opinion of the entire student body.

The chairman of a committee appointed last session to investigate the constitution of the Students' Society, had a report ready to present to the meeting on the findings of the committee. Another question scheduled to come before the meeting was the discontinuance of the Red and White Revue. As a result of some display of rowdiness by some students during a performance last year, there are many who feel that the Revue has become objectionable and are ready to advocate its abolishment. In view of the fact that the Revue assists the Students' Society to a great extent financially, a great deal of comment on this question was expected.

Theodore H. Harris, last year's Editor-in-Chief of McGill Annual, had among others, suggested that the Annual be taken out of the hands of the Juniors and be turned into a general year book with the graduating pictures of the senior year rather than those of the Juniors. This question has been causing some considerable discussion among the Junior and senior classes and is expected to give rise to a great deal of comment when it comes up for consideration at a future date.

Chess Club To Start Season

Tournament and League Competition to Feature Activities

Only one team, the "C" division, has been entered in the Montreal Chess League this season. It was stated at a meeting of the executive of the Chess Club last night. This is due to the fact that there are not enough "B" men at college. The latter, however, will have their opportunity in the various other tournaments to be held.

The rules and regulations governing the McGill Chess Tournament, which proved so popular last year, are slightly different. Instead of two groups, there will only be one, so that each man will have the opportunity of playing with every other member entered in the tournament.

Schedules will be announced every week, and there will be only one game played between each pair, instead of two as last year. If players cannot appear on the scheduled hour, they may postpone their game, providing their opponent consents, and they must hand in the results of their game before the next round is played. He who obtains the highest number of points will be declared the McGill Chess Champion for 1928-29.

The following are entered in the McGill Tournament: Dr. Williams, S. Gold, H. Shapiro, S. Weiner, D. P. Aber, E. S. Berger, W. V. Victor, A. M. Freedman, F. P. Labensohn, F. E. Davis, F. W. Park, R. Billette, C. Fimeno, M. Garmoise, and C. S. F. 1928.

"Daily" to be Issued As Usual Tomorrow

It was learned last night that the "Daily" will appear as usual tomorrow morning, though it is a University holiday. In the past years it has been found that the "Daily" on Sports Day has been in as much demand as on any other day, as it contains in addition to the regular news the program for the afternoon's events, and the names of the competitors from each of the three Universities who will be represented.

It is planned to have copies of the Daily available at the Stadium in the afternoon though these will necessarily be limited in number, so it is advisable to obtain copies of the paper in the different buildings if possible.

An announcement was also made to the effect that Friday night's staff must report as usual for their assignments during the noon hour, and that the publication of the Daily on Friday night will be carried through in the usual way.

Famous Leader Preaches Here

Dr. Maltby Will Lecture in Strathcona Hall

Dr. W. Russell Maltby, D.D., of England, the outstanding leader at the Elgin House Student Conference held in September last, is to be at McGill for four days toward the end of this month, and will preach the University Sermon on October 25th. On the following Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, Dr. Maltby will give three addresses for students in Strathcona Hall.

Since the Elgin House Conference, Dr. Maltby has given a series of lectures in Toronto which are to be published shortly. He has also been at Queen's. His stay in Montreal will be taken up for the most part with meetings around McGill.

Dr. Maltby's three addresses to be given in Strathcona Hall on the 25th, 26th, and 27th, of this month have as their themes: Concerning Certainty in Religion; The Certainty of Jesus and His Relevance for Us; and The Adventure upon Religion.

Though his name is not yet perhaps very widely known in Canada, Dr. Maltby holds a place of peculiar honour among student leaders in Great Britain. He is considerably sought as a college preacher owing to the freshness of his presentation of old problems. The Student Christian Movement sent him as its representative to speak in the universities and colleges of India.

He qualified as a lawyer in Scotland before entering the ministry in the Wesleyan Methodist Church. The driving force of his faith has been his anxiety to see the Church measure up more fully to the large tasks of the day.

Before he took up his present position of Warden of the Wesleyan Deaconess Institute at Hiley, Yorks, Dr. Maltby was President of the Wesleyan Methodist Conference, one of the highest honors of that denomination. Besides editing a series of religious books and translating portions of the Bible from a modern viewpoint, Dr. Maltby has written several works of his own.

The university Church Services in Moyle Hall this year could hardly have a better beginning than to have Dr. Maltby to conduct the first on October 28th.

Tea Room

The tea room in the Union will be closed tomorrow, Sports Day.

News Board

There will be a meeting of News Board of the Daily at 4:30 p.m. today. All editors are requested to attend. Several pertinent matters must be discussed.

Reserved Seats Available For McGill Rooters

The Ticket Office in the Union did a rushing business yesterday as students crowded to exchange their athletic coupons for reserved seat tickets in the bleachers for Saturday. Coupon No. 3 being taken for these tickets without extra charge. Today is the last day on which they can be obtained for the Queens-McGill game.

This is the first time on record that the south-side bleachers have been made into reserved sections, admission to which can be obtained by simple exchanging the athletic coupons. Previously it had been a case of first come first served with the early birds getting the best seats. Now the early birds have to come early to the Union to get any seats at all.

Tickets will be exchanged till five o'clock to-day. They are not transferable and not more than one will be given to each student.

Have Not Yet Chosen Play

Expect to Stage Performance in November

PLAYERS' CLUB

Members Assigned to Various Departments of Theatrical Work

No definite choice of a play has yet been made it was stated at a meeting of the Players' Club yesterday afternoon. Although the Play Reading Committee have already read about seventy plays and have eliminated all but a few, they are still continuing their research. It is expected that the play finally decided upon will be presented the last week in November.

An innovation in the history of the Club was the decision to have addresses by people prominent in the theatrical field. These are to be given at meetings—the first one taking place on Thursday, Oct. 25th. The purpose of these meetings, it was pointed out, is to teach the members the various arts of the drama and other things pertaining to it.

Inasmuch as the Players' Club has, strictly speaking, no legal being, several copies of a proposed constitution were distributed, and this subject will be brought up at the next meeting for discussion and adoption.

It was stated that new offices of the Club, in Strathcona Hall, will be opened on Monday.

In order to carry on the different phases of the Club's work, all the members were assigned to various departments. The following committees have been formed:

General Business Committee: Misses Brown, Colquhoun, Crighton, MacKinnon, Mitchell; Messrs Wright, Marcus, Giddings.

Publicity Committee: Misses McGreevy, Crighton; Messrs. Aylen, Mastrilanni, Slie, Breakey.

Play Reading Committee: Misses Posberg, Crighton, Black, Benning, Smart, Lerner, Harvey-Jelle, Evans, Lee, Donoghue, Rowland; Messrs. Thom, Nicholls, Bailey, Stone, Lewis.

Production Committee: Miss Rattler; Messrs. Aylen, Eve, Gillespie, Greig, Ignatieff, McLeod, Marcus, Mersereau, Rubinovitch, Seymour, Slie, Wright, Webster, Patterson, Glasco.

Scenery Committee: Misses Black, Gilmore, Mitchell, Smart, Niegheon; Messrs. Eve, Gillespie, Greig.

Art Committee: Misses Black, Evans, Khamer, Lee, Neighorn, Smart; Mr. Greig.

Costume Committee: Misses Holland, Black, Eaves, Lee, Rattie, Rowland; Mr. Eve.

List of those who have had experience in acting: Misses Black, Cameron, Evans, Harvey-Jelle, John. (Continued on page four)

Rainfall Is Abnormal

Observatory Reports Storms and High Temperature

The most unusual feature of Montreal's weather in the last two weeks has been the advent of two thunderstorms, a comparatively rare occurrence at this season. The McGill Observatory reports more rain in the first fifteen days of this month than is usual for the entire month nearly an inch of rain having fallen within the last 36 hours.

The whole of eastern Canada has experienced abnormally warm weather for this month, the temperature averaging ten degrees higher than previous records for this month.

Present forecasts are for warm, cloudy weather, with possible showers. No bright sunshine has been recorded at the Observatory since last Sunday, and there is little prospect of very fine weather for the next few days.

Newfoundland Has Strategic War Position

Need of Outside Capital For Development

FIRST MEETING

Col. Bovey and Dr. Hatcher Were Speakers at Newfoundland Club

In the course of an address to the Newfoundland Club last night in Strathcona Hall Col. Bovey remarked on the strategic position of Newfoundland in case of a war in which British supremacy on the Atlantic was threatened. He also spoke at some length on the part of which the members of the Club could play in the upbuilding of Newfoundland for the British Empire. He impressed the members with the fact that they were the future men of Newfoundland and that the exploitation and development of Newfoundland's resources depended on themselves.

Speaking along the same lines Dr. Hatcher stressed the educational features of the country and gave the members some advice concerning their work as a club and after graduation. He deplored the fact that so many students of McGill leave for the United States without making any effort to return something to the college and country that had educated them. He asked the club to organize the McGill graduates in Newfoundland so as to send some poor but deserving students to McGill to continue with their education.

Only Three Meetings

Many of the old members and a sprinkling of freshmen were present when the meeting was called to order. After the minutes were read the president outlined the program for the year. As in the past there will be only three meetings of the club during the year. Of these the meeting held last night was one. The others are the annual Toboggan Outing, which will be held some time in January, and the annual Banquet which is the last meeting of the year. He gave a short history of the club and explained its object to the new members.

Col. Bovey, the guest of the evening then gave an account of the discovery of the island. In his speech he went as far back as 600 A.D. when the Irish were supposed to have discovered it. He then mentioned the Norwegians and Lief Ericson who, in his map, called Newfoundland "The Land of Flat Stones". He worked up through the Basques Cook, the Portuguese and John Cabot.

The Portuguese had made maps of the island and from then on the history of Newfoundland can be traced with accuracy. He spoke of the prosperity of Newfoundland, its position, its resources, and its need of outside capital to develop it. He ended with a plea that the students see that whatever is done should be done (Continued on page four)

Colors Needed For Conversat

Strathcona Hall to be Decorated in Red and White

Those in charge of the decorating for the Freshman Conversat have decided that it would be most appropriate if McGill colors constituted the keynote of the decorations. This plan cannot be carried out without the cooperation of the students.

A very large number of McGill pennants, emblems, crests, cushions, and so on will be required. Those who wish to make the Conversat a success from the point of view of decoration are asked to leave their contributions in the offices of the S.C.M. in Strathcona Hall, on or before Monday, October 22nd. To avoid difficulty in the return of their loans, students should make certain that their names are sewn or printed on the individual articles.

Students' Council

There will be an emergency meeting of the Students' Executive Council today at 5 p.m. in the Union.

To The Undergraduates:

Dear Fellow-Students,

That interest in student affairs is dead, was the obvious conclusion arrived at when the Annual Meeting of your society was cancelled yesterday owing to the lack of a quorum being present.

Is it possible that the undergraduates of McGill, who are so fortunate as to possess the most complete degree of autonomy granted to any university body, are so indifferent of their duties and privileges as to ignore completely their Executive Council which attempts to guide and protect the interests of their members?

You are privileged to attend this meeting and voice your opinions. It is your duty to attend and pass comment, be it favourable or otherwise, and at least you should ratify the work done by your executive for the past year.

Your total indifference is a disgrace to you individually and as a society. If this indifference is due to carelessness, it is certainly not commendable. If it is due to deliberate lack of interest, then you should either be under your former prep school regime or take steps to have your affairs dictated to you by a body less in accord with the ideals of the student government given you by men who have labored hard that you should have only the best.

Matters of vital interest to the society were to be presented to you. Matters of finance that directly concern you were to be discussed. All of this you were aware of or should have been were you at all interested.

Our position as a self-governing institution, envious as it is to our Sister universities, was certainly not strengthened by the attitude you adopted yesterday.

It is my sincere hope that you, who were delinquent, and you comprise about 95% of the society, will find it convenient to fulfill your duty—if you do not consider it a privilege—to attend the Annual Meeting which we will attempt to hold next week.

Sincerely Yours,
 (signed) PAUL MELANSON.

Colloquia List Is Announced

Dr. Barnes Lectures on Ice Engineering Today

The complete list of lectures to be given at the weekly Physics Colloquia was announced yesterday. These lectures deal with a number of special subjects of research in which the professors and students are engaged this season and are open to all interested. Among the subjects to be dealt with are "The Influence of Light on the Disintegration of Ice," by Dr. Barnes, noted authority on this subject; "X-Ray Investigation by O. T. White; "The Atomic Theory," by Dr. A. L. Patterson; and "The Gyromagnetic Electron and the Atomic Theory," by Dr. L. V. King. The colloquia are held every Thursday afternoon, between 5 and 6, in Room 210, Macdonald Physics Building.

The following is the complete list of the lectures, beginning tomorrow:
 Oct. 18.—Ice Engineering: (2) The Influence of Light on the Disintegration of Ice," by Dr. H. T. Barnes, F.R.S.

Commercial Have Surplus

Will Purchase New Rugby Equipment Shortly

A surplus of three hundred dollars brought forward from last year was announced by Harold Banks, president of the Commercial Society, at a meeting held yesterday in the Arts Building. The meeting was informed that this amount was to be augmented by approximately two hundred and fifty dollars, the Society's share of the universal fee.

A motion that a portion of the money be used for the purpose of purchasing some new rugby equipment and also to buy a trunk to safeguard this equipment, was presented to the meeting for discussion and adoption. After various suggestions as to the amount to be spent for this purpose had been made, it was finally decided that the sum of fifty dollars from the fund be used to purchase the necessary articles.

It was brought to the attention of the meeting that due to the absence from the University of certain members of the executive, nominations for the positions of secretary and treasurer were being called for. The nominations are to be signed by at least ten members of the society and will be published in the Daily a week previous to the date to be set for election. The election is to be by ballot and will be held from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. in the smoking room of the Arts Building.

W. R. McMaster was elected by acclamation as Commerce representative on the Union House Committee.

Book Exchange Closes Today

Successful Season Reported—Will Open Again in Feb.

Today is the last chance students will be given to secure text-books at a reduced rate. At five o'clock the book-exchange will close not to open again till February when another opportunity will be given to buy text-books for courses starting in the second term.

This experiment of the book-exchange has been an unqualified success and the amount of business done this first year proves how much such an exchange was needed here at McGill. The money turned in so far totals $1030 and in all probability the patronage will increase greatly next year.

Some time next week, probably Thursday, those who turned their old books in to the exchange will receive the proceeds of the sales. The next day the books which have not been sold will be returned to their owners.

Although the sales have been larger than was expected many have been turned away because the books they wanted were not on hand, and a number of books which were turned in have not yet been sold. There are a great many French books still on sale and it is hoped that these will be disposed of today.

Those who need books for the second-term are advised to buy them today rather than to wait till February when the demand will be great and the price higher.

MONTREAL, THURSDAY, OCT. 18, 1928.

The fiasco of the attempted meeting of the Students Society yesterday was a disgrace to the student body of McGill. Either students here have an overwhelming confidence in the ability of the Students Council to handle affairs, or else there is an absolute indifference to student affairs outside the narrow confines of class or fraternity matters that constitutes serious indictment of the attitude of students at McGill.

The Students Council of this University is responsible to the students for the handling of roughly fifty thousand dollars each year—student's money. It is faced with the responsibility and worry of attending to innumerable details in looking after the students' interests, and in making possible for him the Union, the Daily, and all the other organizations which provide him with an outlet for his interests. It gives a good deal of time and thought in attending to the job—and finds at the end, that the students are not even sufficiently interested to come and listen to what has been done, and what must be done.

Constitutionally, the students must gather twice a year to ratify what the Council has done, while other matters must be placed before the students before even a start can be made in the projects. If students refuse to give up an hour of their time to do these things, it is evident that matters come to a standstill.

Even more to the point is the seriousness of the condition which evidently exists as regards the general attitude of students towards student affairs. Does it take matter of a proposed five dollar levy to drag the students out of the complacent state of mind that seems to be theirs as far as their affairs are concerned? Does it mean nothing to them that the entire matter of the constitution of the Students Society has been a matter of painstaking study recently, and that students must pass on the matter of their own administration a thing of indifference to students at this University?

Personally, we think there was a great deal of thoughtlessness among students about the meeting yesterday. Perhaps the matter was not made plain enough through the columns of the Daily. At any rate, there is one course now open, and that is to come to the meeting soon to be announced. It can hardly be that students will fail twice.

SPORT'S DAY

Tomorrow is a University holiday, and no lectures will be held in any faculty. This holiday, however, has been given for a set purpose—in order that all students may be free to attend the Intercollegiate Track meet at the Stadium.

Sports Day is one of the oldest-established traditions at the University, but there has always been a certain proportion of the student body who place themselves first and use the whole of the day for their own selfish purposes. These people represent a certain type, and a type which any fair-minded person looks upon with derision as an unfortunate necessity in the nature of things. They might do well to remember that the track meet takes up but three hours of the day, and that by lending their support they will do a great deal towards supplementing the efforts of the team which has worked so long and hard in preparation for the meet.

The co-operation of the band and of the cheer leaders has already been assured, and it is now up to the student body at large to turn out and support the Track Team in their efforts to wrest the title from the Blue and White, who have held it for the last three years. The team this year is stronger than it has been since the Championship was lost, and they have a real chance to win the laurels back on their own field. The squad that will be seen in action tomorrow afternoon is substantially the same as that which has gone down to defeat for the last two years. They have stuck at it, however, and now they appear to be in a position to make a strong bid for the Intercollegiate honours.

The least that the students can do is to support them by their presence at the Stadium, and show that their efforts in the face of great odds are not going unappreciated.

BOOKS VIEWED AND REVIEWED

"JAMES WOLFE" IS A WELL EXECUTED BIOGRAPHY--WESCOTT WRITES OF HIS HOME STATE

JAMES WOLFE: MAN AND SOLDIER. By Prof. W. T. Waugh, Montreal. Louis Carrier and Co. $5.00.

By James P. Manion

The picture is that of a soldier, the background is one of contention, and the complete result is a good proof of the fact that an able historian can take his facts from both sides of a controversy, and piece them together into a more plausible unit than previously existed. Thus can we summarize the work that Professor Waugh, the head of McGill's Department of History, shaped and moulded into a most readable story of James Wolfe.

To many, James Wolfe was a madman; by many he was intensely disliked; he was thoroughly trusted by a few superiors, and gained the confidence of his inferiors; of his equals he was the object of ridicule, he was scorned and laughed at, he was the subject of envy and jealousy. His was the lot of the young man and the poor "mixer" who somehow gets along in the world of half-fellows into the activities of the older generation among these waiters upon the good graces of Fortune. He was doomed to a smouldering contempt at the hands of those whom he had supplanted.

That he was fully conscious of his shortcomings appears in many of his letters. Perhaps the secret of his quick rise to eminence then lies in the fact that, knowing his faults, he was able to make full use of them to his own best advantage. The failure is he who attempts to wholly submerge his true nature out of deference or for the sake of conformity. During his life-time he was not a great man; the timeliness of his victory, and the manner of his death are alone responsible for the halo of glory that immediately formed about him. The taking of Quebec relieved Britain, and no better vent for this feeling of relief could be found than in the dead leader of the expedition. It is this unrestrained worship of a romantic end rather than a conspicuous life which made of Wolfe the centre of a biographic controversy which has lasted until our day, and sees its last effort in the present book.

No historian has ever denied that Wolfe was a good leader of men, an able colonel, but many have denied that he was a faultless tactician, a good leader in action. Why, say the majority, did not Wolfe complete his attack on Quebec long before the middle of September, when the failure of the one plan put into execution would suffice to put an end to that season's campaign? Why, say a newer group of authoritative critics, did he not cut off the land retreat from Quebec to Montreal? He already had a fair control over the water route, and could have forced the hand of Montcalm without allowing the majority of the regulars to escape and attempt to regain Quebec in the following year.

It is against these newer criticisms that Professor Waugh is undoubtedly soundest and most particularly original. Undaunted by the high standing of the critics, he devotes four or five pages to proving that the plan suggested by them would have very probably ended in a complete rout for the British. He proves his point with an ability which is beyond question. In fact, throughout all the passages given over to controversial topics, anyone knowing Mr. Waugh will recognize the quiet, unassuming way in which he directs the rapier-thrusts of his most telling arguments. The very reticence with which he enters upon such passages-at-arms with the former and the contemporary biographers of Wolfe gives us an undoubted faith in the sincerity of his reasons for doing so; and the arguments which he thereupon uses are noticeably free from prejudice and even from national reticence. One of the most admirable expositions in the book compares the French and the British Navies of the middle Eighteenth Century in terms which, though allowing a margin of favour to the British sailors, yet kicks itself free from the national sentimental absurdities about the navy. "The British Tar of Wolfe's day was no soaring soul; he was more likely to be a foul-mouthed, drunken, dissolute ruffian. Nor was he the smart, neat, clean sailor-man of the picture-books." On many such occasions does Mr. Waugh show that his national pride does not interfere with his accuracy as a biographer. In some cases, modern historians have found that a deliberate scoffing of the high aims of their native country was a method whereby a book could be made saleable to the independent, questioning and irreverent youth of the day. "James Wolfe" however, can be absolved from such a mercenary taint, for the controversial nature of the subject demands freedom from all racial restraints which could act as a bar to fairness and justice. Nevertheless on occasion, it acts as a healthful douche of cold water upon the heated bias of our Imperial consciousness. Mr. Waugh never goes out of his way to show us some weakness in the British military or civil administration of the day, but whenever he feels that to surmount a false impression the corrective criticism need be applied, he goes right into the business without any more ado.

Throughout all the biographies written about Wolfe, that by Beckles Wilson, the large work by Robert Wright, Parkman's Montcalm and Wolfe, the comments of Bradley and Stanhope, differing views seem to be forever cropping up. This, of course, demonstrates the comparative obscurity of Wolfe during his own life-time. It also assures us that these contentious views will never be satisfactorily brushed into unison. New evidence may be unearthed but the probability remains that what was said in despatches, what was said in letters home, what was said in private journals, will continue to differ as widely as ever. It is almost as hard to grasp anything concrete about certain phases of Wolfe's life as it is to know the actual lives of mythological heroes. It is almost sure that he was a conspicuous boaster. Mr. Waugh does not entirely agree with this view, yet boastfulness would appear, in most humans of our knowledge, to be due in great part to the lack of physical charm or power in an ambitious man. Sensing his deficiency, he protects himself against a feeling of inferiority through this outlet. Stanhope is one authority for the "gasconade and bravado" which Wolfe is said to have assumed at a dinner with Pitt and Lord Temple prior to his last trip to America. The author is inclined to treat the matter lightly and consider that a moment of intemperance at the dinner made his head swim with the power which he was to have. But my personal view is that such a show, exaggerated in the telling by Temple, would fit the character of the ungainly and sickly Wolfe.

Professor Waugh believes that Wolfe had, long before, thought of a landing west of Quebec, even at the time when he established the camp on the Montmorency. Yet we find that the following words are credited to Admiral Holmes in a letter which he wrote immediately after the capitulation of Quebec: the plan to climb up the Anse au Foulon "had GOOD-BYE WISCONSIN". By Glenway Wescott. Harper and Bros. New York. Price $2.50.

By Madeleine Givan

"How much sweeter to come and go than to stay; that by way of judgment upon Wisconsin." Thus does Glenway Wescott voice a universal sentiment in this brief comment on his Middle Western home.

In "Good-Bye Wisconsin" the youthful author of "The Grandmothers" has gathered together a number of emotional sketches with the common setting of the varying Wisconsin countryside. The philosophy of inevitable destiny is the pervading influence—resignation to the commonplace after dreams and desires have been crushed—Fear, the omnipotent, gaping god, ever present, creating havoc in the lives of all those within his reach—and at the end of all, death and decay.

The book opens with a picture of Wisconsin in her many aspects, as viewed by a homecoming son. Between the lines one reads the disillusionment common to any return to a familiar, much-dreamed-of, spot. In "A Guilty Woman" is portrayed one of the cruelties of destiny, the allotment to an undeserving woman of all she asks from fortune. Evelyn Crowe, past murderess and prisoner, winning from her self-sacrificing friend the man whom the other would have served with her life. "The Wedding March" shows the enhancement lent to past events by the mind in retrospect—even as the bride proceeds up the aisle to him, the groom is carried away in thought to the scenes of his first passion. "The Dove Came Down"—Arthur and Emily, who are to be married, taking communion together—and Arthur alone sees the insurmountable barrier between their souls. "The Whistling Swan" in which is given the soul-tearing struggle of a young musician with destiny, and how he finally succumbs, accepting a position in a small college, and marrying the girl whom his parents had chosen for him.

Mr. Wescott uses his characters unmercifully. They are merely a means to illustrate his philosophy, and as such, are not likeable. Rather do we been proposed to him a month before, when the first ships passed the town, and when it was entirely defenceless and unguarded, but Montmorency was then his favorite scheme and he rejected it." This conflicts with the evidence used by professor Waugh, but, of course, may not be authentic. It shows how little was really known of his plans of action around Quebec.

That he was beset with difficulties in the way of personnel is well known. Townsend exposed the mutual mistrust, largely caused by himself, which existed, when he wrote home that "General Wolfe's health is but very bad. His generalship in my opinion is not a whit better." Murray wrote shortly after the death of Wolfe, that "His orders throughout the campaign show little stability, stratagem, or fixt resolution."

Mr. Waugh believes such expressions of opinion to be due to personal rancour, and in this view we shall not quarrel with him.

I thoroughly enjoyed reading Professor Waugh's book. It is written without a flaw, gracefully, easily, and without the least touch of an affected style. It should live to take an eminent place among the controversial biographies about James Wolfe. It is in this field that it will be at its best, for it portrays the official activities of Wolfe very effectively, and without, very accurately. We could wish, however, that a little more of the personal element, of the man who thus acted, had been infused into the book. The idea of biography seems to be changing slowly within the last few years to character studies rather than to mere action portraits. A history of Napoleon must detail the day when his divorce from Josephine was announced; but how much more interesting is that history when it describes the leave-taking from Josephine; the tearing passions of the man who loved her, yet whose ambition was greater than that love; the proud lady and the crying woman, the imperious ruler and the vacillating man. No matter if everything be not altogether true, as long as we are given a character to study! This, of course, is an unsportsman-like criticism, for both types of biography must exist, must flourish side by side. Each has a distinct sphere, a sphere which it is essential should be covered, a sphere which should be found equally attractive by an admirer of the other. "James Wolfe" covers the active life of the man with a distinction and a grace which few biographies will equal.

nity and despise them, human as they are. The style is at times vague, at times naked in its lucidity, with breath-taking, realistic touches of description throughout. For the casual reader there is little attraction in the book.

It must be carefully perused to follow the golden thread of thought which weaves in and out among the complexities of human emotions. The author is very evident in the background, as he himself realises, remarking that in another book he would like to concern himself with writing so that his origins, his prejudices, and his Wisconsin will have disappeared.

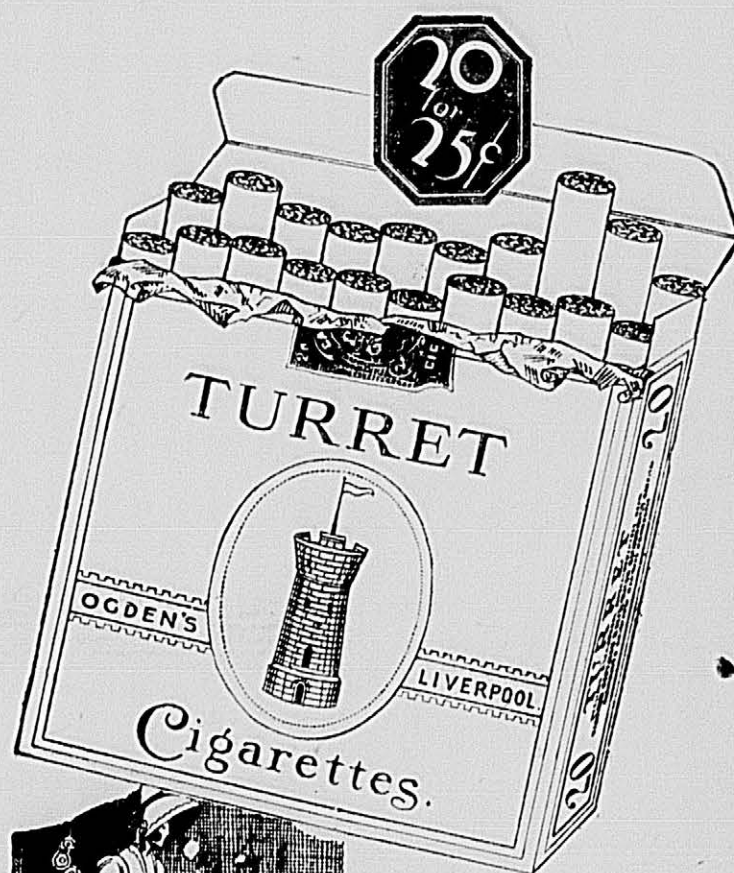

"A banquet table at which, on the whole, one goes hungry for the sake of certain foods; a little nourishment and many drugs—such is the world's hospitality." Truths such as this—echoing familiarly in the mind of the reader—stand out from the maze of words and accost one at every turn; truths which alone provide a sufficient recommendation for this little collection of sketches.

THE ART OF WHISTLER. By Elizabeth Robins Pennell. New York. The Modern Library. 95 cents.

That little collection of classics unified under the same binding by the Modern Library, and sold for 95 cents, recently reached a milestone in its career, when, ten years after it first began to publish the series, it printed the 150th title in the uniform edition.

The editors decided that they should celebrate the event in a fitting manner, so, when the 150th volume was sent to reviewers it was found to contain, in addition to the usual good quality literary masterpiece for which they are famous, 32 reproductions of Whistler's paintings done in the aquatone process. The book is well worth seeing simply for the pictures which certainly do justice to the work of the much misunderstood artist.

The whole book is an honest effort to overcome the prejudice which for such a long while turned Whistler's art into a sort of pariah, which was not to be accorded a place among Academic paintings. The feeling has changed slowly to a deep admiration for the man and his work, and Mrs. Pennell the wife of the famous American artist who knew Whistler so well undertakes to explain the man, and explain the reaction in his favor. She gives him a sympathetic treatment which shows him to us as a high type of individual who took life and his work seriously enough to be always gay. Thus he was converted by a misunderstanding world into a buffoon, and his work treated with ridicule. And yet, now that he is dead, how truly great we take him to be!

McGill Track Men Ready For Meet Tomorrow

Squad in Good Shape For Intercollegiate Game

MOLSON STADIUM

With everything in readiness for the meet on Friday at the Percival Molson Stadium, and the Varsity and Queens teams arriving in town some time tomorrow evening, the McGill team has ended up its period of intensive training, and today will have a thorough rest in order to be at its very best when the competition gets under way at one forty-five on Friday afternoon.

Several of the track men have been suffering from sore and swollen muscles in the legs since the inter-faculty meet, but they have all been undergoing treatment on the rubbing table and with very few exceptions the whole squad is in the best physical condition possible. This afternoon will be spent in trying out the new uniforms, and making sure that they are of a proper fit. The team has decided that the McGill crest will be worn by all members this year, and it will be an extremely smart looking Red and White team that tries to wrest the championship from Varsity.

The announcement in yesterday's Daily to the fact that the University Band would be in attendance at the meet, and that there would be a rooster's practice under the leadership of Cheerleader Chic Parish, should prove a strong incentive for all members of the University to attend the meet and cheer for McGill, as it is a well known fact that concerted cheering is of great benefit to the participants in any form of athletic endeavour. The Red and White team, under Captain Willie Consiglio, will be out there giving their best, and all it needs to give McGill the much-coveted title of Intercollegiate Champions is a lot of vocal support from the spectators. Come on out and do your bit. It all counts.

VARSITY READY

Blue Team Not Overconfident For Track

Toronto, Oct. 16.—A number of the stars who for the past three years have led the Blue and White to victory over Queens and McGill at the annual Intercollegiate track meet will not appear for Varsity on Friday next the result being that quite a few new faces will be among those who journey to Montreal to seek the coveted honours. The gap left in the team by the absence of such men as Christie, Graham and Fitzpatrick is a hard one to fill, but Coach Halbus has been successful in training good men to step up into the ranks. In a number of cases Freshmen who gained recognition at the Varsity Inter-faculty meet last Saturday are filling these vacancies quite capably.

A number of the veterans, Mr. Mitchell, Bill Finlayson, Davenport, Sommerville, Marshall, Sparrow, and McGarratt will be among those who represent Varsity next Friday in addition to these men the team is supplemented by a number of athletes appearing for the first time in an inter-collegiate track meet, and it appears count for anything these youngsters can be counted upon to make a game fight for the U. of T. Three years ago Varsity came back from Montreal bearing the first inter-collegiate track championship that had left McGill for 14 years since then she has easily retained that championship, but with a weakened team chances do not look so good this year. However the boys have been training faithfully, and every man will be in there to do his best for his Alma Mater.

Finlayson, who won the Inter-faculty individual championship is expected to do well this year newcomers in the sprints and middle distances make it hard to pick the winners. Mitchell is entered in the quarter and the half mile. Gilbert and Lee will represent Varsity in the three mile this year. Dr. Wally-Graham being out of it owing to throat trouble, Davenport and Dennis are entered in the polevault.

The latter also being a likely looking prospect in the high jump. Fred McGarratt, who last year broke the record for the javelin throw at Kingston, which was not recognized because of the wind, made a good start by breaking the Inter-faculty record this year, and is out to do the same at Montreal. To prophesy regarding this meet is impossible, but every Varsity man will be out to fight to retain the laurels for the Blue and White.

Annual Golf Match Friday

Students and Professors to Meet at Royal Montreal

The annual Students-Professors golf match will take place on the links of the Royal Montreal Golf Club on Friday morning.

The match will serve as a qualifying round for the intercollegiate golf meet next Friday and Saturday, and the first twenty students had better bear this in mind. Students are urged to get in touch with their opponents some time during the day. In past years there has always been great difficulty in getting every player of a foursome on the tee in time. This year a new system will be attempted. Any of the players listed below one professor and one student can go off with any other pair and score in the following manner, one point for each individual match, and one point for a match taking the aggregate score on each hole. The best team is C.P.R. $20 a.m. to Summerlea, then walk over to Dixie.

TRUE ENOUGH

By Paul S. Powels

He: Yes, I was about sixty thousand feet up when the plane burst into flames and fell like a shot. I had no parachute and had to stay with her. The crash was horrible, but I lived.

She: Why, you can't expect me to believe that! Sixty thousand feet!

He: Well, maybe it was only about thirty thousand. I might have been too excited at the time to get it down exactly. But anyway, I fell thirty thousand feet, and lived.

She: Pardon me for saying so, but I don't see how you could.

He: All right, have it your own way, but at least I was in a falling plane without a parachute, and lived.

She: But why hadn't you a parachute? I thought—

He: I guess maybe I did have a parachute, come to think of it. But it was a terrible drop, and I lived.

She: Oh, don't tell me you made a parachute jump!

He: Well, dammit, maybe not—but I lived!

Loyola Offered McGill Seniors Stiff Practice

Red Squad Look Improved Over Previous Form

AT FULL STRENGTH

LOYOLA Intermediate squad offered opposition to the senior men at the stadium last night, and considering the fact that they the maroon aggregation had just completed a tough game against McGill seconds, the youngsters did themselves proud. Chief interest however lay in the progress of the McGill first team, who were in the second last practice before the big test of the season, the Queen's game.

The red-sweatered squad looked better than ever. The line showed vast improvement over its form in Toronto, while the secondary defence made smart stops of likely Loyola plays. It looked altogether like a squad teeming with fight, and ready to step into the Queen's game for all they were worth.

Reports from Queen's indicate that the tri-colour will be at full strength for the game here Saturday, and with Sutton, Britton and Morgan back on the line-up, the Lincesters should be one of the most formidable squads in the east. It is likely that different tactics will be employed against Queen's than were used against Varsity last Saturday. The wide open rushing game played by the red men fitted in perfectly with the Varsity scheme of things, but with the cagey players from Kingston, no chances can be taken. From all indications it will be a terse, tightly-played game.

Ken Tremblay, kicking half of the McGill squad was in uniform yesterday but merely jogged around the track for a few minutes. Ken has recovered from his recent injury, but is taking things easy until the game Saturday. Jack Moar is out with the squad again. The flying wing was kept out of last Saturday's match on account of a special examination, but with scholastic difficulties overcome, Moar should prove a distinct adjunct to the red squad.

Memories of former days were recalled yesterday, when the familiar voice of Coach Shaughnessy, familiarly known as "Shag" to thousands of students and grads, was heard over the gridiron. Shaughnessy was out with his Loyola squad, and incidentally lent a hand in giving his old love, the McGill red team, a few pointers. Shaughnessy gave his intermediates a hard day's work putting them up against the McGill seniors for the better part of an hour. His boys were pretty well exhausted when the practice was over, and one of them, Laurie Burn gave the coach a fright when he stayed a faint in the dressing room. A doctor was summoned, but Burn was able to return to his home after a short rest.

Tickets for the Queen's game are selling at a brisk rate, and it is likely that a record throng will watch the two teams struggle for supremacy of the intercollegiate union.

LAW TO PRACTICE

The Law Football twelve will hold a practice this afternoon on the Little Campus at 4 p.m. Owing to yesterday's adverse weather conditions a signal practice and chalk was held in the smoking chamber of the above faculty. The new plays which were designed by Coach Millen were all gone through to perfection and everyone present expressed satisfaction with the proceedings.

Another call is made for material and every able-bodied man in the Faculty of Law who has had experience in the art of playing football should report to the manager and coach on the Little Campus at the set hour.

Seconds Beat Loyola Squad

Intermediates Score Win Over Champions, 9 to 6

The McGill Intermediate football team, displayed a vastly different brand of football from that shown in their last game, defeated the strong Loyola outfit, at the Stadium yesterday afternoon by a score of 9-6. The west-enders had hitherto only had one point scored against them in the three games they had played prior to yesterday. The form showed by the red team was a surprise to everyone, including themselves, the Loyola team, and the small crowd of spectators which was more than half made up of Loyola supporters.

McGill's points came by a place kick by Kritzwiser in the first period, followed by a rouge and a touch in the second, while Loyola's score consisted of a rouge which was the first point of the game, and a touch in the final quarter.

The scoring opened early in the first period, when Loyola kicked for a rouge. After a nice run by Simpson and a magnificent plunge by Klein, McGill was in position for a placement which Kritzwiser executed from the 25-yard line. The score at the end of the first period was, McGill 3, Loyola 1.

In the second quarter, due in large measure to some great running by Talpis and Kritzwiser, McGill had the ball on their opponents' 20-yard line, and tried an outside kick. After the mule was sorted out, it was found that several McGill players were on top of the ball. The touch was not converted, and the score at the end of the period was 9-1, as Kritzwiser had booted for a point earlier in the quarter. Savard and McAlair were best for Loyola in the first half, while Simpson, Kritzwiser and Talpis stood out for the Red and White.

Up till then, McGill had easily had the best of the play, but in the second half Loyola threatened on numerous occasions, due to some beautiful runs by McAlair and great kicking by Savard. Shaughnessy was bucking well for the Maroon team, who finally gained possession on McGill's 25-yard line. An outside kick was snared by Loyola ten yards, out and on the first buck Shaughnessy went over for a touch, which was not converted. McGill were offside on the kick-off, and from then to the end of the game Loyola had easily the best of the play, but were unable to score, leaving the final count 9-6 for McGill.

Loyola started the game with some of the juniors on their line-up, but were soon forced to put on their first-string men. The McGill team was made up partly of senior subs in order to give them experience, before the crucial game with Queen's on Saturday. Kritzwiser turned in a remarkable game and should show up well if given a chance on Saturday.

Medicine Held Arts To Draw

Seven All Tie in Opening of Interfaculty Rugby

Yesterday in the opening encounter of the interfaculty Rugby league Medicine held Arts to a 7-7 draw. The heavier Medical Squad, playing loose football, were fortunate in the outcome, for their play at times resembled last years when in the championship match they lost the inter-faculty crown to Commerce.

The game was clean, both sides playing good football despite the inclement weather. Mort Gibbons was the outstanding man on the field scoring all the Medical men's points. Size scored the touch down for Arts which tied the score. Arts all but won the game when with three minutes to go, they had the ball on the doctors twenty-yard line but the kick went wild and the final whistle blew with the score tied.

Although Medicine certainly had the advantage in weight and power, the bad co-ordination on their part and the loose handling of the ball by the safeties would have cost them the game had it not been that the breaks were with the doctors. On one occasion Gibbons blocked a kick, gathered up the ball, and ran sixty yards for a touch down which was not converted.

Tarbox, the former quarter of the Med team was not out, but is expected to appear in the next game.

Tommy Robertson was missing on the Arts line-up on account of injuries, but Black filled in very well at the quarter position. On the line Harris was a tower of strength for Medicine and O'Meara was strong on the Arts squad.

The line up was as follows:—

Soccer Players Meet "Atholl"

Game Schedule For 4 O'clock Today on Campus

When the Soccer squad turns out against the eleven from the "Duchess of Atholl" on the Campus at 4 o'clock this afternoon they are assured of partaking of something more than a tea party. The seamen are a snappy outfit, and know the game from A to Z. Most of them are Liverpool boys and have been sailing to Quebec and Montreal for several years. Eddie Gribben, diminutive left half of the ship's outfit, is a former star of the old "Empress of Britain" eleven, when they were playing in the Quebec City league. Tysley was one of his teammates and has lately been playing for the "Empress of Scotland."

Queen's vs. McGill

Ceremony Will Mark Jubilee

University of Western Ontario Shows Remarkable Growth

The University of Western Ontario, which will celebrate its fiftieth anniversary at a special jubilee convocation on Oct. 19. On this occasion Dr. William Sherwood Fox will be officially installed as President, and certain honorary degrees will be conferred. Hon. W. J. Roche, M.D., Chairman of the Civil Service Commission of Canada, and Chancellor of the university, will preside, and delegates will be present from many Canadian universities.

From small beginnings the university has grown to large proportions and this year has enrolled over a thousand students. Ample provision is made for expansion in the extensive campus which is attractively situated and occupies some two hundred acres.

Early spring will see the work commenced on a new stadium to be erected through the generosity of a number of the Board of Governors. Next fall Western will compete with the University of Toronto, Queen's and McGill in senior Intercollegiate Rugby, and the stadium will be ready for the opening games. The University of Western Ontario has held the Intercollegiate Rugby championship of Eastern Canada for the past two years.

The first charter was granted in 1878 to the Western University of London. From 1882 until 1908 the university was under the control of the Church of England and was known as the Western University and College of London, Ontario. In 1908 a reorganization was effected and municipal support was given to the university for the first time.

In 1914 a grant was made for the Medical School by the Provincial Government and in 1916 the Arts Department also began to receive assistance from the Province. Since the year 1920 maintenance grants have been made annually by the Ontario Government, that of the present year being $380,000.

The Medical college has a Class "A" rating and holds an enviable place among the medical schools of the country. The Institute of Public Health is a department of the university and opened for work in 1918. The practical work of the institute has been paralleled by its extensive educational activities. Through lectures, extension courses and newspaper articles a great deal has been accomplished toward educating the general public along public health lines.

Dr. Fox, the new president, has long held a prominent place in university circles and has done excellent work in placing the University of Western Ontario on a sound basis. His appointment is a popular one with students, alumni and staff of the rapidly growing London institution.

Correspondence

If the correspondent signing himself G.A.G.D., Sc. '30, will submit his name to the editor, he will be glad to publish his letter.

To the Editor,
McGill Daily.

Sir,
Yesterday I was paid the honour of being nominated as representative of the students of the Faculty of Law on the Union House Committee.

I have decided to decline the nomination and desire that it should be withdrawn, owing to the fact that I am not a frequent user of the Union and know little of its management, whereas the other candidates for the committee from the law faculty, Mr. H. J. Erdrich, has for a number of years taken a keen interest in the Union and will, I am sure, be a better representative than I would be, and would be of more value to the committee.

In closing, I wish to thank those who signed my nomination and assure them of my appreciation.

Yours truly,
Harry E. Grundy

Puts Little Faith In Intelligence Tests

Blush Easily if You Want to Succeed

Native intelligence plays very little part in the success or failure of men in college, according to recent tests made by the Colgate University psychological laboratory. After 55,000 hours of investigation, furthermore, the conclusion was reached that it is the introvert who makes the greatest success of college undergraduate life. "The introvert is an easy blusher. He has a clever pen but an awkward tongue. He is extremely conscientious, has a tendency to worry and likes detail work." So, it is thought by the "Amherst Student," hundreds of the entering class, fresh out of preparatory schools, will rush to a mirror to see if, when properly embarrassed by an obliging room-mate, they are able to blush.

Further probable results among the entering freshmen are graphically outlined by the paper. Many men, it writes, will cultivate the stuttering habit as the epitome of awkwardness in speech. Deep lines of worry will deface the noble brows whereon no blemish rested but a day ago. Men will write rows of figures just to add them, will make neat entries in ledgers or pursue whatever other minute work their ingenuity may devise. And good scholarship will undoubtedly have made its mark in college.

Freshmen, however, need not worry too much over the discoveries made by these laboratory tests, the "Student" hastens to assure; for practical advice to the incoming members of the college has slight connection with these theories. Consistent work, beginning immediately with the first week of study, will preclude the necessity of vocal impediments, and the writer adds, sullen non-blushers may even challenge psychology by remaining in college for four years.

HIS FAVOURITE BEAST

An Atlanta man on a hunting trip in Mississippi, met an old dorky who had never seen a circus in his life. When the big show came in the following season to the town of Vicksburg the teller of the story sent for the old man and treated him to the whole thing—arrival of the trains, putting up the tents, grand free street parade, menagerie, main performance, concert, side show, peanuts, red lemonade, and all.

The old dorky followed his white patron through with popping eyes, but saying never a word. Late in the afternoon they got back to the Vicksburg house.

"Joe," said the patron, "you enjoyed it?"

"Boss," said Joe fervently, "Ah shore did."

"What did you like most?"

"Boss," answered Joe, "Ah shore liked it all."

"Well what impressed you most?" Joe scratched his head. "Well, boss," he said, "I reckon it was dat dere animal what y' call de camel."

"The camel, eh? What was so remarkable about the camel?"

"He suttinly is got such a noble smell!"

"Have a cigarette."

"Sir, I go to Wellesley."

"Pardon me, Have a cigar."

Gets Big Revenues From Oil Royalties

Amounts to 1 1/2 Millions Since 1922

Federal oil royalties, which began to pour a river of gold into the University's treasury in 1921 and which financed the greater part of the campus building in recent years, have dropped back to the level at which the flow began. As the state treasurer announced in Cheyenne, the University's share for the current year is $92,234.56, the lowest ebb this income has reached since the first installment in 1921. The peak was attained in 1924 when the University received $360,000 the maximum permissible under the law.

In the University annual reports the royalty receipts are listed as of the year following that in which they are received. Thus the first installment is credited to 1922, and the current installment will appear on the books for the year 1923.

The flow of revenue from this source year by year describes a comparatively even curve, rising from 1922 to 1925 and dropping each year since. The figures for the entire period are:

1922	$ 98,594.38
1923	150,637.71
1924	230,780.13
1925	360,000.00
1926	268,248.29
1927	232,369.64
1928	172,070.08
1929	99,223.55

While the decline in Wyoming's oil output has caused a drastic curtailment in the University's revenue from this source, the receipts since 1922 have reached the impressive total of $1,612,123.79—Wyoming Branding Iron.

Made Harbour Tour

English Women Have Attended Lectures Here

Of the party of English women who have been touring Canada under the auspices of the I.O.D.E. six have been entertained in Montreal during the past week, and have also been attending lectures at McGill. Yesterday the Board of Harbour Commissioners entertained them at luncheon on board the Sir Hugh Allan, and an interesting tour around the harbor was made.

Col. Bovey was in charge of the expedition. Other guests included Miss Adele Languebec, President of the M.W.S.S., Miss Eileen Peters, President of the M.W.S.S.A., Miss Betty Archdale, President of the R.V.C.A.A., and members of the I.O.D.E. and the hostesses of the English girls.

After luncheon, Mr. A. T. Harvie, President of the Harbour Board, made a short speech of welcome to the guests, speaking of the good feeling between the various portions of the Empire. Mr. Archambault then said a few words, followed by Miss Thompson, chaplain of the English girls, who expressed their appreciation of the hospitality afforded them.

Tomorrow the party will proceed to MacDonald, where they will be entertained. They are sailing on Friday on the Duchess of Atholl for England.

Co-eds Give Opinion of Men

Did you ever wish that you could tell somebody your opinion about the other fellow without being classed as a cat or a hypocrite or something equally disparaging?

Students in a certain class at Marquette had an opportunity of doing this very thing—giving their frank impression of four fellow students who had attracted their attention.

What kind of men do girls like? Oh, tall, sophisticated, experienced men—and they hardly rebuke the man who "seems to be one step behind himself all the time." The stock of men who have acquired that nonchalant blasé air of the man of the world, is high.

And they know what they don't like. In the opinion of one co-ed, the typical collegiate merita this scathing denunciation: "He has no serious intentions and thinks college is a four-year tea party—intends to make it one anyway."

And the men? Their preferences? Primarily, men don't like large girls and paradoxically they do like the athletic type, particularly blonds with blue eyes.

The co-ed flapper comes in for her share of attention, being characterized by a discerning male as "humorous yet serious when occasion demands" nonchalant, yet not indifferent to the things that count, but whose life is a monotony of intermittent yamping hours.

One co-ed was rather enigmatically classed as "fussy about dress, but not loud or boisterous."

Eds and co-eds are in union in one preference—Optimism, smiles and a happy outlook on life are invariably commended.

That is but nevertheless true saying that unlike attract, receives indubitable proof. Short girls like tall men and vice versa, while athletes like the more effeminate, clinging-vine type.

However, opinions vary among girls and men concerning the same individual. A girl writes of another member of her sex as follows: "Her external appearance inclines toward the B.B.D. but is belied by a large and extensive acquaintance with books and music and plays."

A boy, dissecting the same specimen, writes: "Neat and fast-working, extremely talented. Takes matters light-heartedly."

The person who is ecotistical is highly praised by one individual who maintains that this condition builds up self-confidence and poise.

A co-ed made a rare discovery—of a man who has a "natural inhibition to do wrong." Marquette co-eds, she says, would like to see a few more of this type.

One man has possibilities but "needs to be waked up." Another is a drifter and a certain young lady hopes that life will give him plenty of hard knocks instead of letting him pass by on his appearance of culture and intelligence.

A sisterly and unselfish interest is shown by a co-ed who bewails the fact that a truly athletic type of girl "is missing out on all the sweetly-romantic, and undoubtedly foolish dreams of the average girl."

NEWFOUNDLAND HAS STRATEGIC WAR POSITION

for the good of Newfoundland and not for the enrichment of foreign capitalists.

Dr. Hatcher emphasized some of the points on which Col. Bovey had spoken and spoke also on the changing character of Newfoundland. He dwelt on education in Newfoundland and mentioned the Memorial College which was striving to give Newfoundlanders an education in the first two years of college at least. He stressed the need of returning something, in ideas or in more concrete form to the college and country which had educated one.

The meeting adjourned at an early hour.

for the seamen, Violette and Giovando will have their work all out watching him. He is a former schoolboy international player, and was also signed up with the Everton Reserves, and during his two years on the "Empress of Australia" he played on the ship's team in the Quebec City Football Association and was instrumental in gaining the championship for his team being a great goal getter.

The Red forwards will find a hard man to beat when they try Wilson, the "Duchess" goalkeeper. He is another former schoolboy international and is the cause of a great deal of heart break among many a forward line.

As regards team play the Red men will most likely prove superior, as they have been playing together for quite a while, whereas the seamen, although a great deal, as the "Duchess" of starring as individual players, have not had the opportunity of playing together.

Atholl" is but a new ship, and her crew is composed of men transferred from different ships in the company, and of men from many other ships. Nevertheless, the team will prove a strong aggregation and will make the Red team go "all out" when they line up against each other this afternoon.

This match will be in the nature of a practice for Finlay's boys, in preparation for the first Intercollegiate game of the season, when the McGill outfit travel to Kingston tomorrow night, where they will play the R.M.C. eleven. The same team that plays against the "Duchess of Atholl" will also face the cadets in the Limestone City. For this afternoon's match Coach Hay Finlay has switched the line-up a little, sending Tommy Gavin back to the centre half position, and replacing him by Jack Maule. Denny will play centre forward.

The teams line-up as follows:
McGill Duchess of Atholl
Brown Goal Watson
Giovando Right Back Nelson
Violette Right Half Bailey
Gavin Centre Half Tydsley
McKinnon Outside R. Sherwood
Watt Inside R. A. N. Other
Denny Centre Forward Quinn
